While working in Stony Brook Hospital Olivia Garcia looked back all the hard work she had done to be where she is. It didn't start in the college she went. It all started in her junior year in Central Islip High School, where Olivia Garcia decided she wanted to work in the medical field.

During her junior year she took the LNP test to become a nurse but she failed, that didn't stop her. In her end of her junior year she decided to go for Medical Assistant. Olivia noticed she loved to assist people. She wanted to treat her patients the way she wanted her family or her to be treated when they get sick.

In her senior year she attended Eastern Long Island Academy of Applied Technology to become a Medical Assistant. Her instructor was Mrs. Demilio "one of my greatest teachers, she taught me everything I needed to know" Olivia said. Olivia's class was difficult but she loved what she did, even taking out blood from people to help them out. Anything that had to do with helping others she loved doing.

On July first 2015, she graduated Eastern Long Island Academy of Applied Technology. She got her diploma for Medical Assistance. "That was one of my happiest moments of my life, because I'm closer to my dream" she cried.

After graduating she started working in the office of her family doctor where she did her internship. Olivia had everything she needed but she wanted to achieve more in life because that wasn't enough for her. Olivia wanted to be the best of the best.

One year later after graduating Olivia attended Suffolk Community College. She decided to go there because Suffolk has one of the best nursing classes. She also said "Suffolk is way cheaper than other colleges and you're taking the same classes".

In 2018 she graduated from college, with a diploma to become a nurse. Olivia achieved her dream she became a nurse. She applied in all the hospitals she could, but her dream was to work in Stony Brook Hospital. It took 2 months for someone to call her but someone did. Olivia had some much experience, and that's what they loved about her.

"No matter what your dream is, accomplish it no matter what situation you're in and no matter how long it takes you will achieve it if you want to" that was Olivia's last words during the interview. Olivia worked hard for what she wanted and she achieved everything she wanted.
